“Landscape Patchwork”

Hugged by Sea, Rivers and Mountain, Caminha embrace us into a genuine “Patchwork of Landscapes”, luxuriant vegetation, crystal clear and friendly waters from the rivers Minho, Coura and Âncora, lush green hills which cover several villages, and the imposing and omnipresent Serra d'Arga with its 700-meters height.

The beautiful beaches of Foz do Minho, Moledo, Vila Praia de Âncora and Forte do Cão (Fortress) with its splendid whiteness and brightness, are the landmark of Caminha, a source of tourist attraction, where history and the built-in heritage complete this patchwork of imposing monuments spanning all historical ages. There are an array of leisure areas and vantage points to discover. The summer also brings a vibrant nightlife all-year-round in several places across the county, and a gastronomy intensely marked by the flavours of the sea, river and inland.

A Region with History

Forte da Ínsua (Fortress) – Built between 1649 and 1652, is located on a small rocky islet at the mouth of the River Minho, near the coast

With an extensive natural and cultural heritage, the county of Caminha amazes the visitor by its medieval ‘look’ at this county town centre. Across the whole region, the visitor “breathes” the History of Portugal itself which is extended like a printed book through the town’s cobblestones, alleyways, romantic corners, and in the various spaces rich in artistic, religious, military or urbane details, by simply walking across its villages.

In the outskirts of the town, there is still remains of ancient civilizations, mostly ascribed to prehistoric and proto-historic periods, like rock engravings, burial mounds, dolmen and fortified hilltop stone forts ('castros'), in an extensive number of monuments and ancient remains that have lasted until our times, which are kept alive through a large number of guide-books and itineraries, available for any specific age the visitor wish to “visit”, in a comprehensive mixture of past and present.

Caminha is Amusement

Folklore

By its roots and entrepreneurial spirit, the ‘caminhense’ community displays an increasing dynamism, thus contributing for the large cultural offer the county boasts.

Let be seduced by the diversity Caminha has to offer:

- through recreating history of the medieval times, which fill the streets of the town's historical centre with amusement, music, theatre, and plenty of fantasy. It's a challenge to enact the medieval spirit, all dressed up or interacting with walker-ons and artisans, and tasting the delicacies of the region, in taverns and bars that amuse the Medieval Fair of Caminha;
- through promoting the traditions and ties the County is attached to since the beginning of times with the sea, through the Festival of the Sea and Sardine;
- through musical shows in which the motto is diversity to please the public, with highlights to the Festival of Vilar de Mouros, internationally acclaimed by all music lovers;
- through theatre sessions in which the amateur theatre displays the traditional talent of this people;
- through fascinating literary meetings highlighted by the Book Fair;
- through exhibitions of the art galleries, in particularly the “Arte na Leira”, encompassed by the Serra d'Arga as backdrop, and by its unique surrounding, the rudeness of the crags in each stone and waterfall. This has become one of the most celebrated events in the whole Caminha municipality, where distinct works of painting, sculpture, drawing, photography, pottery, jewelry, glass, fashion and furniture can be seen and admired.

The Caminha council joins to the great amusement shows that are becoming recognized by the international scene.
